INCOME SOURCE HISTORY VALIDATION TO MEET HIRING NEEDS

Employers and organizations utilizing independent contractors need options in validating the income sources of the candidates they employ or engage as contractors. While traditional employment verifications are often utilized as a means to validate work history and ensure candidates possess the qualifications stated in their resume or job application, direct verification of employment with a previous employer is becoming increasingly more difficult and costly to obtain. WageSource Verification affords hiring organizations an option to efficiently validate multi-year income source history, ensuring workers are truthful about their past wage earning timeline. Further, obtaining direct employment verifications can lengthen the screening process as previous employers may not respond to requests in a timely manner. Validating income source history through a candidate's IRS tax documents helps ensure consistent onboarding timeframes across your candidate population reducing overall time to hire.
