We have been using CV-Library for over five years, and find it to be very effective. We love the Watchdogs because you can set them up and almost forget about them – they carry on working in the background and just send you through relevant CVs as and when they are registered. We tend to use these for the trickier positions we're recruiting for, which can help to alleviate some of the pressures we face when hiring for these roles. The database is great for the roles that aren't so tricky to fill, especially with so many candidates to choose from. What's more, we can just get in contact with them straight away, which helps to speed up our time to hire!
